The weekly textbook discussion allowed me to see what my peers were focusing on and how they were perceiving the information.
the real world examples were very helpful
The supplemental readings required for study guides were helpful and informative. The questions on study guides were thought provoking, and I thought the entire format of the course was well organized for an online course. I also liked that Professor Jensen sent out emails at the beginning of each week to address the content that would be covered for the week, as well as including assignments and due dates. Professor Jensen also provided feedback on assignments, graded assignments in a timely manner, and even provided updates during Hurricane Debby for the class. Professor Jensen also answered my emails in a timely manner when I had any questions about the course or assignments. I feel as an online course instructor Professor Jensen exemplifies the title of online instructor for Georgia Southern University. This is something that I have noticed with a majority of my online instructors that I have had at Georgia Southern University and while attending The University of Tennessee at Martin.
The Study Guides were very helpful and made sure you read the materials to understanding and know the answer.

Several aspects of the course really helped me learn. The reading materials, especially the case studies and articles, gave real-world examples that made it easier to understand the public management concepts we learned. The lectures explained important topics, like policy development and leadership in the public sector, in a clear and simple way. The independent assignments, like research papers, let me explore topics I was interested in, while the quizzes and exams helped me check my understanding and remember key ideas. Overall, all these activities worked together to give me a complete learning experience and helped me improve both my knowledge and skills in public management.

The reading assignments can feel a little extra and unnecessary, but they werent terrible to complete
I thought this professor did a great job keeping his expectations clear, and the requirements as well as feedback. I would only suggest switching up the homework requirements to be less repetitive and more interesting for the student. Overall though, he was a very professional professor.
Nothing it is good.
I think the professor did a great job with all of the information being given out for us to be able to learn on our own.
